

ALL YOU NEED TO KNOW

Located on the island of Panay in the Western Visayas, the province of Iloilo and its buzzy capital Iloilo City are linked by the Guimaras Strait to the independent island-province of Guimaras and to Negros Occidental, the northwestern half of the island of Negros. Negros Occidental's capital is Bacolod City.

As well as being a great base for exploring the natural attractions that dot the surrounding province of the same name, Iloilo City is one of the main access points for Boracay Island with its powdery white beaches.

GETTING TO AND AROUND

Iloilo has easy flight connections to Manila (75mins), Cebu (55mins), Hong Kong (2hrs 40mins) and Singapore (3hrs 35mins). Jeepneys, tricycles (motorised taxis) and buses are the most common ways of getting around the city and province as a whole.

Bacolod City is a 50min flight from Manila and a 30min flight from Cebu, or you can catch a ferry from Manila, taking 18hrs. There are also fast ferries to Bacolod from Iloilo City.

Jordan in Guimaras is 20-25mins from Ortiz Wharf in Iloilo City by pump boat, or there are local ferries from Parola Wharf in Iloilo City to Buenavista.

WHERE TO STAY

Most of Iloilo City's longer-established hotels are clustered in City Proper, but it is compact and uncongested enough for you to explore easily wherever you stay. Upmarket hotels are opening in Mandurriao's burgeoning business parks, while Jaro and La Paz are popular with budget travellers, and Molo and Villa Arevalo have larger beach resorts. Guimaras is also known for its relaxed beach resorts, as is Sipalay in Negros Occidental. Bacolod has plenty of good-value, comfortable accommodation around the cathedral, Public Plaza and general central area.

IT'S MORE FUN IN THE PHILIPPINES

WELCOME TO ILOILO & NEGROS OCCIDENTAL

Dubbed the ‘City of Love’ for its friendly, gentle and soft-spoken inhabitants, Iloilo City is large but has a human face: its seven districts all have their own character thanks to colonial influences, and their own town centre with a plaza, Roman Catholic church and public market. Its newer business district Mandurriao has an array of dining and nightlife options, while Villa Arevalo has a beach vibe and lots of seafood restaurants.

The rest of the province is a mecca for outdoors activities, including hiking and diving. The island of Sicogon in the north, accessible by bus and then boat from Iloilo City, is being developed as an eco-destination. Iloilo City is also the access point to the beach paradise of Guimaras with its water sports and boat-hopping to outlying islands.

Relatively wealthy for its sugar production, Negros Occidental is a centre of arts and culture, with Silay City north of the capital of Bacolod City dubbed ‘the Paris of Negros’ for its heritage houses. But it has its own beautiful pristine beaches: the seaside city of Sipalay is seen by some as an alternative to Boracay and is renowned for its diving as well.

“Iloilo is a hidden gem, full of history and nature [and] a less-crowded alternative to a big city like Manila.”

WHY IT'S MORE FUN IN ILOILO & NEGROS OCCIDENTAL

There are plenty of opportunities for activity-packed day-trips and short breaks within Iloilo province: hiking in forests and to waterfalls, snorkelling or scuba-diving in the Kuliatan Marine Sanctuary, and sailing to caves and a saltwater lagoon. Guimaras is renowned for its water sports and island-hopping, while diving is a big draw of Sipalay in Negros Occidental.

CULTURE & FOOD

Dubbed the ‘Province of Festivals’, Iloilo has plenty to entertain, divert and educate, whether it be museums of local history or the lively bar and nightlife scene. But it’s Negros Occidental that is the region’s true cultural highlight, with splendid architecture – including the Palacio Episcopal, San Sebastian Cathedral, the Capitol Building, and Spanish and other churches – plus steam locomotives bearing witness to the the province’s affluent golden age.

Eating here is a joy. Don’t miss the local classics of batchoy (pork and noodle soup), lechon manok (chicken spit-roast over charcoal), talaba (oysters), pancit molo (pork wonton soup), ‘Kadyos, Baboy, at Langka’ or KBL (pork, pigeon pea and jackfruit stew) and laswa (a clear vegetable soup). Then of course there are the sweet mangoes for which Guimaras is known.
